Jacob's Ladder sways

Settle two English-speaking families in a town here and they'll start a book club. Add a third Anglo family and you'll probably have a folk club.

Since the '80s, English folk-singing groups have stopped and started like vintage Subarus climbing the hills to Jerusalem on a hot day.

Once a year for the past 20 years, the folk fans have converged on a hootenanny called Jacob's Ladder, organized in various locations in the North by burly, bearded, UK-born schoolteacher Menahem Vinegrad.

The event was dubbed the "Anglo-Israeli Mimouna" - and not entirely in jest.

One of the mainstays of the festival has always been the Taverners, also founded in 1975, a group that specializes in bawdy drinking songs and country music.

In his original advertising campaign for this year's Jacob's Ladder, to be staged next weekend at the Kibbutz Ha'on holiday resort on the shores of the Kinneret, Vinegrad proudly pointed out the link between the festival and the Taverners.

"Their 20th anniversary and ours too," boasted the handbills and newspaper advertisements.

Vinegrad spoke too soon, however, and has been forced to re-write the ads. The Taverners and Jacob's Ladder have parted company over an issue once regarded as a swearword among genuine folkies - money.

The sudden dispute is evidence that "the times, they are a-changin'" at Jacob's Ladder.

IF FURTHER proof was needed, many once-faithful Jacob's Ladder fans are starting to question the high entrance fee - NIS 100 per adult, NIS 60 for children and pensioners. Some have sadly concluded that commercialism has climbed to the top of Jacob's Ladder.

In response, the Taverners' leader, Jonathan Miller, is going ahead with plans to put on a rival hootenanny called Musical Jamboree at Kibbutz Gezer on August 25 and 26.

It will include the Taverners and many others from the folk-club scene such as Jill Rogoff, David Perkins and DuCittre, as well as guest artists Dani Litani, reggae singer Tony Ray and the Black Hebrews. The entrance fee will be NIS 60.

"After 20 years, the cracks are starting to appear at Jacob's Ladder," Miller says. "It's time to rebuild a festival somewhere else."

The Taverners walked out of the Jacob's Ladder lineup because Vinegrad won't pay the artists minimum wages, says Miller, who originally made his name as a star in the TV children's program Hoppla Hey.

When Jacob's Ladder started, nobody expected wages. People came to jam and have fun. However, everybody and everything comes of age.

"Now at least two members of the group, Paul Moore and I, make a living out of playing music."

"During the weekend that I come to Jacob's Ladder, I am forced to give up other gigs."

"We also have a responsibility to the Israel Musicians' union, EMI, not to appear for free. We don't want more than EMI's minimum wage, which is $120 a performance, plus VAT."

Moore adds: "We're constantly being told that we should play for nothing at Jacob's Ladder because it's a sacred community event, above haggling over money. Yet someone is making something out of the show."

"Just look at the entrance prices. If I can

Organizer Menahem Vinegrad, shown here at last year's festival, has plenty of answers to critics who say the entrance fee is too high. This year's special guests are Irish band O'ke (insert).

The folk-music festival has come down with a mild case of the blues. The Taverners, who have performed each year in the festival's two-decade history, refuse to play Jacob's Ladder for free anymore.

By Joel Gordin

see the books and be convinced that nobody is getting rich on my goodwill, I'll appear all day for free."

The Taverners are following in the footsteps of professional country singer Susie Miller, who refuses to play at Jacob's Ladder without pay. "The only free shows I do are for charity," she says. "The profits of Jacob's Ladder don't help any underprivileged."

This year's show will thus consist of amateurs and semiprofessionals, along with a guest group called O'ke, which elings traditional Irish music. The entrance fee to the festival includes includes permission to camp out on the kibbutz grounds.

Campers must supply their own equipment and sleep on the grass or beach. The normal price for camping on the site on a weekend is NIS 64 a car (with a maximum of five people), or around NIS 11 per person.

"A couple with two small children must pay NIS 320, not including food, to sleep on the ground," comments Rochelle Egal of Tel

Aviv, a folk-club regular. "It's ridiculous."

Mike Watts of Netanya agrees. "The prices are definitely too high. Last year, Vinegrad offered us Tom Paxton, a folk-singing legend. This year he is giving us O'ke, of whom I've never heard, and a crop of local folkies whom I can hear every second Wednesday night at the Tel Aviv Folk Club for a NIS 10 entrance fee."

Zvi Zemel of Rehovot, a part-time folksinger, is more charitable.

"I agree the price is steep, especially for families, but it's worth it. The fun is meeting friends and becoming part of the folk atmosphere."

VINEGRAD answers critics by saying that organizing Jacob's Ladder "is a full-time job, and most of the money made is put back into the festival."

"There are more than 150 performing in the two days of the festival," he continues. "I cannot pay only one or two groups. It's contrary to the spirit of Jacob's Ladder. I would have to pay them all, which is clearly impossible."

"I give every single performer - and their families - accommodation in bungalows at the site, plus a food allowance and traveling expenses. If I paid the professionals, I could not extend the luxury of a free weekend to the other performers."

"Ha'on is a step up from previous venues at Mahanayim, Horshat Tal and Gan Hashlosha. Those who criticize the price should take into consideration that the area is closed to everybody except the festivalgoers. They must consider all the extras I provide - improved sound system, security, first aid, overtime lifeguards, to mention only a few."

"The price is reasonable for a festival which will carry on from Friday evening till Saturday night, with two stages in operation. On Saturday, the workshops will be held in air-conditioned rooms and there will be activities for all the family."

"Compare, for example, the prices at the Haifa blues festival, which were more than NIS 100."

What about the world-class artists at Haifa, as opposed to the amateurs at Jacob's Ladder?

"I don't have overseas artists? Bringing them is a large expense, but I feel that the Israeli folk scene must be put on the world map. Anybody who complains about the choice of O'ke does not know what they are talking about. O'ke played on the center stage at the last Cambridge Folk festival and they have received rave reviews in such prestigious publications as Folk Roots. Trust me: Their music is truly breathtaking."

"Anybody who has a problem with the gate price can take advantage of the many discounts being offered to groups and [to] those who pay in advance."

NONE of the semiprofessional and amateur players has followed the Taverners out of the show, although there seems to be an undercurrent of sympathy with Miller and Moore.

Shai Tochner, a semiprofessional who is also a member of the Taverners, will play for Michael's Corral, the band accompanying country singer Michael Levin.

"Professionals like Jonathan and Paul should be discreetly paid. It won't break Vinegrad's bank and it won't upset anyone else," Tochner says. "I don't care how much anybody makes. I play for free because Jacob's Ladder is special to me."

Vinegrad, however, is unmoved. "I am sorry the Taverners won't be taking part," he says with a shrug, "but the show will go on without them. People are standing in line to play. There is only one Jacob's Ladder."

'Honorary woman'
Henry Jaglom will be showing his work and airing his obsessions - Israel among them - at the 12th Jerusalem Film Festival next week.

By Allison Kaplan Sommer

A scene from 'Baby Fever,' which was inspired by Jaglom's friendships with women in their 30s and 40s whose biological clock is deafening, but have not managed to meet the right man or are struggling with fertility problems.

Spreading 'Baby Fever'

Henry Jaglom should be a happy man when he arrives next week as a special guest of the 12th Jerusalem Film Festival. After all, a movie binge in the capital of the Jewish State is a marriage of the director's two biggest fixations.

"My wife says I'm only really interested in two things: Jews and show business," he confesses on a long-distance line from Los Angeles. "And she's probably right."

Jaglom is a filmmaker who should know a thing or two about obsession. His most successful movies have been about the issues we agonize about and lose sleep over, like overeating, falling in love, heartbreak and the possibility of never having kids.

Doesn't sound like typical commercial Hollywood fare? It isn't. Big-budget Rambo-style flicks with guys with muscles and guns or women in bikinis were never Jaglom's speed. And after 10 low-budget, independently produced films, he wears the label "maverick" with pride.

Jaglom began his Hollywood career commercially enough back in the 1960s, as an actor appearing in bubblegum television series like Gidget and The Flying Nun. But from the first film he directed, A Safe Place, with Jack Nicholson and Orson Welles, it was clear that he and the movie mainstream had very different ideas of what makes a good film. He says that the late Welles, a close friend, inspired and counseled him to follow his own vision and gave him strength to buck the system.

Another mentor was writer Anais Nin, the first appreciative member in what was to be a loyal Jaglom audience: women. Jaglom's films focus not on power struggles, but on relationships, life, and love, and have often been intensely personal. In his film Always, he reenacted his painful breakup with his first wife, with Jaglom playing a character based on himself and his ex-wife doing the same. He had hoped the film would bring them back together. It didn't work. "But it had a huge and gigantic success. And it turned out it was women who were lining up at the box office. The men were saying it was self-indulgent."

Like for another Jaglom hit called Eating, focusing on women's obsession with food. His latest film, the one he will be showing at the festival, Baby Fever, was inspired by his friendships with women in their 30s and 40s whose biological clock is deafening, but have not managed to meet the right man or are struggling with fertility problems.

His lack of appeal with the male audiences does not seem to bother Jaglom at all, who has always had a strong preference for the company of the opposite sex, beginning with a close relationship with his mother.

"I FIND that men are so totally disconnected from themselves on the whole, there's no question they are out of touch, and what they are concerned with has nothing to do with who they are. The women in the world are concerned with who they are, with the important, true stuff of life.... Sanity to me meant the closeness of women. I try not to even have lunch with men," he says, half-joking. He adds: "Well, OK, I'll spend time with men if they are interested in Israeli politics. Then I can have a nice lunch with them."

He is serious about the Israeli politics part. The first thing he looks for in his morning newspaper is news about Israel, and he faithfully reads The Jerusalem Post and The Forward every week. He has been here "about 20 times," beginning when he was 19 years old.

"I had the normal conflicts of an American child, my parents saw the Star of David as 'our flag, and I resented that. But today my whole sense of myself as a Jew has to do with Israel. I'm not Jewish culturally, religiously or linguistically; I only sense I'm a Jew in the sense of history and memory.... I'm one of those Jews who wouldn't have been a Jew if it hadn't been for Hitler. And it's a Jewishness that takes its expression in an identification with, a concern for and an obsessive interest in Israel. I don't care about sports, but I care about Maccabi Tel Aviv, I don't care about agriculture or the stock market, but I will obsessively focus on these subjects if they have anything to do with Israel."

None of this interest came about by chance. He grew up in a "very Zionist," well-to-do family on Central Park West. Jaglom's industrialist father was an immigrant from Eastern Europe; half of his family went to the US and half to Israel. His aunt is none other than Raya Jaglom, world president of WIZO. Besides the film festival, Jaglom will be coming for the July 15 opening of a permanent exhibition at the Tel Aviv Museum named for his late parents, the Simon and Marie Jaglom Pavilion for Impressionist Art. Twenty-five years ago, his parents donated 50 paintings from their collection to the institution.

As if he didn't have enough to do during his visit, Jaglom will also be shooting film for three days here, in what will be the opening scene of a new movie, Where or When.

Those who have followed Jaglom's romantic trials and tribulations through his films were pleased when he finally found love with his second wife, Victoria Foyt, who will be accompanying him to Israel, along with their two young children, Simon Orson Jaglom and Sabrina Marie Jaglom.

He and his wife wrote Baby Fever together and collaborated on the movie he made next, called Last Summer in the Hamptons, which the Jerusalem festival organizers had hoped to premiere; but "it's just not ready in time," says Jaglom.

One can't help but wonder, with so many women struggling to tell their stories, what the feminists in film really think of a man like Jaglom making a career of exploring their issues.

"My job is to tell the truth. That makes people feel less alone, less crazy, whether it's baby-hunger or being alone in life. That means exploring problems that don't have a solution. Those feminists who think it's true, like my work. Those who think you have to always show how the characters get over their troubles and are triumphant at the end, don't like it. I don't believe in happy endings, I believe in the truth."

Soon, he says, he will have tangible proof that the female film community likes him. "I was voted an honorary woman recently by the Caucus of Women and Film," he says proudly. "I'm waiting for my plaque."

- ★★★ Worth seeing
- ★★ Patchy
- ★ Poor
- No star: Wretched

Adina Hoffman

★★★★★ THE ADVENTURES OF PRISCILLA, QUEEN OF THE DESERT - Stephen Elliott's film is a delightful chronicle of a gay Sydney cabaret act's journey across the Australian wilderness. As the dignified transsexual Bernice, Terence Stamp manages to endow even impending seediness with a kind of aristocratic grace. He also looks good in lipstick. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

★★★★ AMATEUR - A stylized parody of the self-discovery quest - Homeric, Pindaric or pop-psychological - Amateur is by far the most satisfying of writer-director Iain Hartley's cronions to date. Fresh and affectionate, the film takes shape with the out-of-body frisson of one of the pornographic stories written by Isabelle (Isabelle Huppert), a freckle-faced ex-nun who claims to be both a nymphomaniac and a virgin. Perhaps the most typical character in Hartley's weird menagerie, Isabelle swaps enigmatic one-liners here with a genial amnesiac and a naive porno star. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

★★ BEFORE SUNRISE - Two beautiful strangers meet on a train from Budapest. He's American and must catch a plane for home at dawn; she's French and heading back to her studies at the Sorbonne. On a whim, he persuades her to disembark in Vienna and spend the night wandering with him throughout the stately city. Jesse (Ethan Hawke) and Celine (Julie Delpy) are the modern sweethearts. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

★★ BOYS ON THE SIDE - Three pretty women (Whoopi Goldberg, Mary-Louise Parker and Drew Barrymore) drive across the country. Along the way they laugh, hug, cry, reveal their deepest hopes and fears and paint each other's toenails. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance strongly suggested.)

★★★ 1/2 THE BROWNING VERSION - In 1951, Anthony Asquith directed the first screen adaptation of Terence Rattigan's measured classroom tragedy about a much-deepened classic teacher whose marriage and career have long ago collapsed. Mike Figgis's surprisingly successful remake stars Albert Finney and Greta Scacchi as the Crocker-Harrises, whose conjugal sorrow is meant to follow loosely the outline of Aeschylus's The Agamemnon. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★★★ BURNT BY THE SUN - It's the summer of 1936 and Red Army Colonel Serguei Kotov is spending his day off at the dacha. Russian director Nikita Mikhalkov's movie is neither a nostalgic period piece nor a harsh retrospective judgment of a traumatic era. Instead, the film attempts to sympathetically reconstruct the whims and hesitations that propel a small group of people through a single difficult day. (Russian dialogue, Hebrew and English subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

★★★★ CRIMSON TIDE - The drama's primary setting is the interior of an American nuclear submarine, where the crusty captain (Gene Hackman) and his thoughtful young second-in-command (Denzel Washington) vie for control of the crew and the deadly warheads. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance strongly advised.)

★★★★ DEATH AND THE MAIDEN - The most interesting bad movie of the year, Roman Polanski's film is based on Chilean exile Ariel Dorfman's nervous chamber drama about a victim of police torture (Sigourney Weaver) who confronts the man (Ben Kingsley) she believes raped and brutalized her, years before. Weaver's bearing is so horsey and all-American that her rages seem profoundly personal, almost homelike. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

★★ DUMB AND DUMBER - Though it's hard to make claims for the subtlety of a film whose jokes center around such stuff as extra-strength laxatives and dead parakeets, the creators of this Jim Carrey vehicle at least grasp the concept of irony. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★★★ 1/2 ED WOOD - Tim Burton's movie is designed for buffs of catatonia, eccentricity and Edward D. Wood Jr., the man considered by many to be the worst film director of all time. This black-and-white biopic isn't meant to serve as an artistic defense of Wood's anti-mastery; instead, Burton and screenwriters Scott Alexander and Larry Karaszewski glorify Wood's badness itself, holding it up as evidence of his creative gusto. With Johnny Depp hamming absurdity as Wood and Martin Landau as a poignantly doped-up Bela Lugosi. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★★★★ FORREST GUMP - In case you haven't heard, Robert Zemeckis's smash-hit movie features Tom Hanks as a down-home, half-wit hero who triumphs over several decades of American civil unrest by doing just what his mama tells him and refusing to ask questions. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★★★★ INTO THE WEST - Mike Newell's film isn't original, but it is lovely - a muted child's fantasy about two poor Dublin kids who forge a magical bond with a wild white horse and set off on bareback for the Irish coast, a place beyond time and adult supervision. With Gabriel Byrne and Eileen Barkin. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. General audiences.)

★★★ 1/2 JUST CAUSE - The first half of this Arne Glimcher movie tells the straight-ahead story of a poor young black man, accused of a crime he did not commit. The second half is about something else altogether. Despite its affinities with a more thoughtful type of legal drama, Just Cause turns out to be just as cynical and shallow as you might expect of a Hollywood currently in the thrall of O.J.-mania. Starring Sean Connery and Lawrence Fishburne. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

★★★ 1/2 KISS OF DEATH - Based very loosely on a 1947 screenplay by Ben Hecht and Charles Lederer, Barbet Schroeder's film is set in the dingy, modern-day Queens of stolen-car dealerships and topless bars. It's jarring and creepy and surprisingly rich. Starring David Caruso, Samuel L. Jackson, Nicolas Cage and Helen Hunt. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

movie is trash, just the sort of self-indulgently lush, mythic trash that can burrow its way deep into one's brain and refuse to budge. Three brothers - among them horny surfer boy Brad Pitt - share a woman, several battles, many accidents, deaths and shoot-outs. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

★★ MURDER IN THE FIRST - After three years in solitary confinement, an Alcatraz prisoner (Kevin Bacon) stabs a fellow inmate to death. He seems a cocky young lawyer (Christian Slater) decides to put the prison itself on trial for torture. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

★★ NELL - Dubbed 'Bride of Gump' in the American press, Michael Apted's film about a full-grown wild child (Jodie Foster) discovered in the backwoods of Appalachia is the last and arguably the least subtle in a string of recent movies that confuse nostalgia for a simple past with mental limitation. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★★★★ OUTBREAK - Fast-paced, smart, and camp as a thriller could be, Wolfgang Petersen's film packs the same scary, funny punch of an old-fashioned horror movie. Dustin Hoffman stomps and lunes as a principled army doctor determined to beat a killer virus. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

★★ POCAHONTAS - Ostensibly based on a true story, Walt Disney's latest animated musical is set at the beginning of the 17th century. It tells the tale of a pretty young Native American woman who falls in love with John Smith, an English settler to Jamestown, Virginia. As the two get to know each other better, they attempt to mediate between their different cultural backgrounds and, ultimately, between their warring peoples. Good intentions aside, the film is saccharine and annoying. In the interest of constructing a nature-conscious, feminist, anti-imperialist kiddie picture, the filmmakers have necessarily reduced a very complex story of sexual attraction and colonial domination to what else? - cartoon terms. (The movie exists in two versions: one with English dialogue and Hebrew subtitles; one with Hebrew dialogue. General audiences)

★★★★★ PULP FICTION - The winner of this year's Palme d'or at Cannes, Quentin Tarantino's film is a rich, funny, violent, oddly earnest tour de force, made up of a framing story and three discrete tales of seamy gangster life. In a conceit borrowed from Robert Altman and/or Charles Dickens, the various characters wander in and out of each others' episodes, sometimes as principals, sometimes passersby. With John Travolta, Bruce Willis, Uma Thurman, Samuel L. Jackson and others. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

★★ THE QUICK AND THE DEAD - Sharon Stone doesn't act in Sam Raimi's darkly stylized Western, she poses. And Raimi's slick visual direction only adds to the sense that Stone's horse has wandered way off course. His Old West feels closer to Madison Avenue than to the OK Corral. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance very strongly advised.)

★★★★ RICHE RICH - Kids are bound to like this movie because it's full of neat gadgets like the robot-bee (a remote-control stinging critter). Based on the Harvey Comics series about the miniature millionaire Riche Rich, the film also features real-life rich boy Macaulay Culkin. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. General audiences.)

★★ ROB ROY - Despite its uncanny resemblance to a Monty Python lampoon, Michael Catton Jon's movie recounts with grave reverence the trials suffered by the Scottish folk hero Rob Roy (Liam Neeson). (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Children under 17 not admitted without an adult.)

★★★ 1/2 THE SHAWSHANK REDEMPTION - This deliberate plink about suffering and belief is set almost entirely within the gray confines of a maximum-security jail. Starring Tim Robbins and Morgan Freeman. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance strongly advised.)

★★★★ THE SILENCES OF THE PALACE - A coming-of-age story set in the 1950s, during the reign of the last boys, or royal governors, Tunisian director Moufida Tlatli's first feature focuses on Alla, the illegitimate daughter of a palace servant. (Arabic dialogue, English and Hebrew subtitles. Not recommended for children.)

★★★★ THE SNAPPER - Stephen Frears's The Snapper is that rare entity, a genuinely sweet film about people with real teeth and real skin. The Curley family - dad, mom, six rowdy kids and a dog - also have their share of real problems. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★ STARGATE - Ronald Emmerich's Variation on a Theme by George Lucas is so slick, so dumb, so utterly devoid of meaning and inspiration, that active attempts to block the film's unique particulars are unnecessary. There are few unique particulars to remember, save the mechanical ones, which don't really stick with you. They just blare and boom through your consciousness, then loudly whiz away. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

★★ WHILE YOU WERE SLEEPING - In Jon Turteltaub's emphatically upbeat film, Sandra Bullock stars as a lonely travel worker who saves her crush (Peter Gallagher) from an oncoming train and then, while he's in a coma, falls in love with his brother (Bill Pullman). (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.)

All shows are in Hebrew except those marked with a star. Times are p.m. unless otherwise stated.

How about acting lessons, Billy?

Penny Starr

Finding out which TV programs people watch is like sneaking through their drawers. It's such an intimate thing, so revealing.

Particularly surprising was the news this week that Wednesday nights in the household of our country's leader are given up to Melrose Place.

Can you imagine Leah Rabin calling to Yitzhak from the living room, saying, "Hey! What d'you think?!" Allson just left Billy at the altar?

According to Andrew Shue (Melrose Place's adorable, hunky Billy) who was visiting here this week, that's what probably happens. And he should know. He first met Rabin in America a few months ago at a Jewish actors' fund-raising event, where the PM told 28-year-old Shue he admired his work and invited him to visit.

This Tuesday they met again in Tel Aviv. Shue said he believes there are two things every person should do. "One is to be a teacher (Shue taught math in Zimbabwe and New York City), and the other is to come to Israel."

Rabin responded with another invitation: "You have come to Israel. When are you going to teach us how to act in films?"

AHA. So Rabin thinks we need an acting coach. He could be right. There was something about Ephraim's Troubles that troubled me. Something about Dovaleh Glickman's acting style that reminded me of Zehu Zeh.

Hysteria, exaggerated double takes, hiding behind a bunch of flowers - it was all so hammy. I know that Glickman is an accomplished stage actor. And he does a fine job on Zehu Zeh and in the Yellow Pages ads ("We-we-we-we" having been a part of a catchphrase not so long ago). But in this week's first episode of Ephraim's Troubles (Channel 2, 9:05 p.m., Tuesday) when wife Sara went into labor and hubby Eli had sympathy pains and started panicking, it was a bit too overdone for adult TV.

At one point, when Eli and Sara were sitting outside their own house, unable to sneak back in past their stern eastern-bloc baby-sitter (Isn't that an insulting stereotype?), Eli has a screaming tantrum and Sara becomes snide. Which begs the chicken-and-egg question of whether Israeli men rage and women get snotty because they watch too many Israeli shows, or the Israeli shows are like that because that's how people really behave. Either way, I wish scriptwriters would change their tune to something more positive. Or at least give us something more amusing.

Let's hope they'll settle down and take the edge off that bug-eyed, strained look of acting too hard. Because the series certainly has good ingredients. It's based on Ephraim Kishon's popular, comic stories; it's directed by Eran Riklis; and it stars Glickman and Limor Goldstein. Put together, these talents should be able to bring us something more subtle than a childish frantic husband and a controlling, guilt-inducing wife.

EPHRAIM'S Troubles is Keshet's prime-time answer to the other locally made shows - Rishet's comedy Itche and Tel-Ad's rather good soap opera Fool's Gold. The battle for ratings between the three franchises was like Bart Simpson's fight with his friends over a comic book.

In this week's The Simpsons (Star Plus, Saturday, 5 p.m.), Bart, Milhouse and Martin put up $100 between them to buy the first ever copy of Radioactive Man. Bart would get to read it on Mondays and Thursdays, Milhouse would have it on Tuesdays and Fridays and Martin could take it on Wednesdays and Saturdays. They would all fight over the left-over day. (If the brilliant Matt Groening and Co. can't solve the difficult division of three into seven, why should we expect Rishet, Keshet and Tel-Ad to find the answer?)

The boys were obsessed over Radioactive Man because of a comic-book convention. Kids

The talents of Limor Goldstein and Dovaleh Glickman, co-stars of Ephraim's Troubles, should be put to more subtle use than in these hammy roles. (YONI HAMANCHEN) who came in costume got in for half price. That of course meant there was a "Lost and Found" stall for all the capes and masks that went missing. A whole line of unhappy children queuing up for their bits of lost costumes. It tugged the heartstrings. Maybe I was having one of those days when just reading the names of the families who donated Magen David ambulances brings tears to the eyes.

But it was so pathetic when Martin went up to the counter and asked forlornly if anyone had handed in one Vulcan ear.

ANOTHER fine pair of Vulcan ears was being shown off in the Star Trek 25th Anniversary Special (Star Plus, Saturday, 5:30 p.m.). Leonard Nimoy (foreverSpock) and William Shatner hosted the two-hour homage to the voyages of the Starship Enterprise.

Oh, how they've aged! The rug-sporting Shatner and coke-bottled Nimoy looked like two old poker-playing uncles reminiscing over their mispent youth.

"I remember when the magnetic plasma transfer didn't work." "No, no, it was that damn anti-matter matter generator that broke down."

Whichever it was, Gene Roddenberry created a fantastic space opera which, for all its bridge-shake fakery, has stood the test of time.

The crew's phasers are like today's lasers. And doesn't that place of equipment into which Captain Kirk used to say "Beam me up, Scottie" look just like a Cellcom phone?

NASA scientists and astronauts are among the show's avid fans.

The original crew members of Enterprise (remember that marking "NCC 1701" on the underside?) all spoke fondly of the show.

Chekov, Scottie, Sulu and Uhura waxed lyrical about "the message of hope for the future of mankind."

They all looked chubbier or scragglier or grayer, except for DeForest Kelley ("Bones"), who even in the first series looked like he should have been dead from disspilation. But I'm glad they're all still going strong, and I hope they're raking it in from all the reruns.

As they say, "May the show live long and prosper."
